

You are cordially invited to attend a LaMarsh talk by:
Dr. Nazilla Khanlou and Dr. Attia Khan (Ph.D. candidate)

“The Barriers and Challenges of Racialized and Immigrant Families with Children and Youth with Developmental Disabilities”

- This presentation will provide an overview of findings from our recently completed community-based qualitative study in which racialized mothers and service providers were interviewed. A brief video of the project will also be presented.
- Emerging recommendations will be shared.

Monday, February 11, 2019 at 12:00 noon (1 hour), Room 519 Kaneff Tower
Please RSVP your attendance to backhous@yorku.ca by February 6, 2019.

Nazilla Khanlou, RN, PhD, is the Women's Health Research Chair in Mental Health in the Faculty of Health at York University and an Associate Professor in the School of Nursing. She is also a member of the LaMarsh Centre for Child and Youth Research. Professor Khanlou is founder of the International Network on Youth Integration (INYI), an international network for knowledge exchange and collaboration on youth.

Website: nkhanlou.info.yorku.ca/ <https://twitter.com/YorkUOWHC>

Attia Khan, MBBS, MSPH, PhD(c) is a recipient of the 2018-2019 LaMarsh Student Leadership Award. She previously practiced as a physician and surgeon and is now completing her doctoral studies in the Department of Health Policy and Equity at York University. As a graduate research assistant to Dr. Nazilla Khanlou, she continues to conduct research on racialized and immigrant women and youth in the areas of development disabilities, mental health and health promotion.